

We are...national distribution

Few organisations, if any, can match Allied Express' ability to distribute express freight throughout Australia. When your customer network spans the country, you need a transport partner that effectively does the same. Not including line-haul vehicles, Allied Express has over 1000 couriers operating out of distribution centres in all major capitals. This, coupled with another thousand vehicles operated by some 50 regional agents, means that, through Allied Express, you can offer a service to your clients that is truly national.

It's the Allied fleet which is at the very heart of our capability. By employing our couriers at both the pick up and delivery end of the process, we can offer a genuine door-to-door service unmatched by our competitors. And the size of that fleet is such that our coverage is not only widespread, its fast. Delivery into national destinations is not only on the designated day; we'll get it there in the morning!

Express Freight uses the first available road or air service between capitals to affect the most effective overnight delivery service for your goods. For regional deliveries not covered by air-freight, Allied's Road Express links up with our national agents network to enable us to deliver to any part of the country reachable by road.

With Allied as your national transport partner, you have an organisation that will work in-step with your company at the end of the supply chain where performance really counts - delivery to your customers. If your customer base spans the country, you owe it to yourself to call us.

If shifting freight fast is what you want, Allied Express is who you need to be shifting to.
