

We are...same day

Allied's same-day service is, quite simply, the fastest way of sending an urgent item across the country - bar none.

When you book a same-day express service with us, it is immediately flagged at the highest urgency level and an entire 'fast-track' process kicks in. A consignment number is allocated and an executive-level driver is despatched.

Once picked up, your consignment is taken directly to the airport and lodged as "Same Day" for the next available flight. Apart from the airlines' requirement that freight be lodged one hour before take-off, a same-day delivery cycle is one of constant motion with one eye fixed on the clock.

Once established, the flight number, departure time, arrival time and airline consignment note reference are relayed back to the sending base by the driver and a pre-alert is activated by e-mail/phone to Allied personnel at the receiving end.

An executive-level pickup is co-ordinated with the aircraft's arrival and a driver is despatched to inwards cargo armed with the relevant details. The goods are then delivered to the receiver in the shortest possible time. Once the consignment is delivered and signed-for, the Proof of Delivery (POD) is called through to the Same Day Coordinator. An alert is sent to the sending port who, in turn, will notify you of delivery. As standard Allied practice, the POD information is then posted on the website.

Allied Express same-day is a reliable, timely method for those last-moment, critical-deadline situations when overnight just won't do. And while it's not the kind of service you would use every day, it's comforting to know that when the pressure's on - Allied's there.
